Before your baby's first word, you will hear your baby's first coo, your baby's first babble and so on. Your baby will start producing sounds very early in his life, as soon as 2 months. If you "coo", he may coo back, or give you a high-pitched baby sound. That's a sort of conversation too! The babbling starts around 6 to 8 month, and it's one of the most amusing parts. How fun it is to hear? However, those can't be considered your baby's first words, no matter how excited we are to hear it ...

The best way to help your baby say his first words is to talk to him — a lot! Your baby will be eager to pick up on your verbal cues. Narrate your day, describing what you're doing as you dress your baby, cook dinner or walk down the street. Speak the names of objects and people. Read to your baby, pointing out objects and their names in the pictures he sees. Ask questions, hold one-sided conversations — and listen if he answers.
